In 1892 Bryan said that prices were too high and advocated "Tariff reform" to prevent consumers from being "robbed." Now he says that the gold standard is responsible for low prices.

In 1893 Bryan told the wage-earners that the dollar did not buy enough, and many of them believed it. Teday the burden of his plaint is that the dollar "buys too much." That is a different story. Can any workman swallow it?

Adopted at a time when the most magnificient results had been tested through Protection, it has arrested industrial growth, and sent the Nation on the road to ruin. Powerful as a destroying agency it has proven impotent and week as a saving ordinance. That "cheapness" which was thought to be secured, has cheapened men as well as commodities. The consumer has suffered with the producer. Falling most heavily, and striking first at ••••••••• the wage-earner, it has dealt blow after blow at the whole industrial life of the kingdom, reduced profits of manufacturers, incomes of clerks, country merchants, mechanics and all who depend on the rewards of labor for subsistence. It has eaten into the vitals of the Nation like an incurable disease. Skilled artisans have fled the country, followed by capital and industries, seeking shelter under that policy of Protection to home industries through which a Nation can become great and its citizens prosperous. As indisplaced by competing imports, instead of finding employment in other industries, they have found relief either in emigration or in almhouses. Goods have not been paid for with goods. Imports, instead of stimulating domestic production, have closed factories, thrown labor out of employment, silenced machinery, and increased the army of unemployed and beggars. Instead of stimulating artisans and manufacturers to greater exertion and higher skill, Free trade has blighted their prospects, destroyed hope and left them in despair, committed to a life-and-death struggle for existence. Instead of undermining and destroying foreign rivals it has forced them as a means of self-defence to build up industrial systems captain C. C. Berkley, Commandant taunton Military Academy.

the State-Both Parties Claim the Victory.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 3 .- The indications are that Kentucky Tuesday will cast the heaviest vote in the history of the state. There is going to be so much scratching, however, that the counting will be slow. A great many county seats are 30 miles or more from telegraphic communication, with mountain roads to be traversed, and it will be 11 o'clock before anything definite can be ascertained as to the general result.

The campaign managers for both parties express supreme confidence in the result. Chairman Sommers, of the free silver democratic campaign committee, gives 29,514 as his estimate of Bryan's plurality outside of Louisville, which he concedes to McKinley, with the reservation that the labor vote may develop great strength for Bryan.

Chairman Roberts, of the republican campaign committee, says 15,000 is arock bottom estimate of McKinley's plurality. Neither side makes any new claims on the congressional contests. Col. Breckinridge is going to have a hard fight in the Seventh dis-trict with chances slightly in his favor.
